CONSTRUCTION SALVAGE AND RECYCLING Toolkit

Metro developed this guide as a reference to help contractors, developers, architects and property owners in the Portland metropolitan region save money and conserve natural resources by reusing and recycling construction and demolition debris.

Because the recycling industry changes rapidly, information relating to businesses in this guide may have changed. Fees may have changed based on market conditions and new firms may now exist. For updated information, call Metro Recycling Information at (503) 234-3000 or log on to www.metro-region.org/toolkit.

Always call ahead to confirm a recycler's hours of operation and ensure that the recycler can accept the materials you wish to recycle.

The following industry associations/organizations endorse this directory:

CONSTRUCTION SALVAGE AND RECYCLING Toolkit

Construction salvage and recycling are good for business and for the environment. Metro offers practical tools to help contractors, architects and developers save money, earn credit for “green” building practices and keep reusable or recyclable building materials out of the landfill.

How to use this guide

You can use this guide to locate the material you want to recycle and choose a recycler located near your job site. If you are unfamiliar with the Portland metropolitan region, refer to the map of facilities sent with this guide or log onto www.metro-region.org/toolkit. The interactive search version of this guide will find the closest recycler to your job site and display a map of the area around the recycler's location.

If you already know the name of the recycling facility you want to use, refer to the alphabetical listing of facilities in Appendix A (page 97 ) or on the Find a Recycler map inserted in this booklet.

If you are unable to find a recycler for a specific material, it may not be recyclable. Call Metro Recycling Information at (503) 234-3000 for more details.

Recycling may be mandatory. If your job site is in the city of Portland, you may be required by ordinance to recycle your construction and demolition debris. See Appendix B for assistance (page 111).

If your job site is outside the city of Portland, you are encouraged to reuse and recycle whenever possible. See Appendix B for information.

Save money by recycling

Recycling, salvaging and reusing construction waste can save you money by reducing disposal costs. While garbage disposal fees in the metro region are $69.86 per ton plus an $8.50 transaction fee, most construction waste can be dropped off at a recycling facility for fees ranging from nothing to $35 per ton. When you recycle, you not only save money, but you also help conserve natural resources.

Portland metropolitan area contractors disposed of approximately 250,000 tons of construction and demolition debris (about 65,000 drop-box loads) in 2005. Metro estimates that 60 percent of this material could be reused or recycled.

Types and percentages vary from project to project.

How to salvage and recycle

Three options for recycling:

1. Salvage and deconstruct first:

If you are demolishing part or all of a building, remove salvageable items as early in the project as possible. Salvage is the removal of reusable building materials before demolition. Deconstruction can be employed in most wood-frame and some metal-frame buildings where it is possible to disassemble the structure in reverse order of assembly, to re-harvest the materials for reuse. See the salvaged and used building materials section on page 69 for a list of salvage/deconstruction contractors and retailers.

Advantages: May reduce the cost of demolition, resulting in revenue from the resale of materials or in a tax deduction receipt for the value of the materials salvaged or provide building materials that can be used in the new structure.

In some cases, reuse or restoration can qualify a building for historical designation that carries a substantial tax credit.

2. Source separate your different debris types: separate similar materials into categories such as wood, drywall, metal, etc.

Start by identifying two or three materials that you will have the most of and that will require the least labor to separate. Keep these materials in separate loads.

Advantages: Dumping fees for recyclable materials are usually lower than for mixed materials; more than 100 facilities in the region accept different source-separated construction/demolition materials.

3. Put all your construction debris together in one container:

Mixed construction debris should be dropped at a facility that sorts materials out for recycling. There are seven facilities in the region that take mixed materials for recycling. (See pages 43 and 44). Dumping fees for mixed materials are usually about the same as for normal garbage, but for health reasons, food waste is not permitted in loads bound for mixed construction debris recycling facilities.

Advantages: Requires little or no additional job site sorting. Great for smaller jobs or those with limited footprint for multiple drop boxes.

People places • open spaces

Clean air and clean water do not stop at city limits or county lines. Neither does the need for jobs, a thriving economy and good transportation choices for people and businesses in our region. Voters have asked Metro to help with the challenges that cross those lines and affect the 25 cities and three counties in the Portland metropolitan area.

A regional approach simply makes sense when it comes to protecting open space, caring for parks, planning for the best use of land, managing garbage disposal and increasing recycling. Metro oversees world-class facilities such as the Oregon Zoo, which contributes to conservation and education, and the Oregon Convention Center, which benefits the region's economy.
